About the job:

As Trade Compliance Counsel, you will be part of the team responsible for identifying and complying with import and export compliance requirements for Google's EMEA operations. You will support a range of functional areas within Google and will be working for clients in Google offices globally. You will serve as a technical expert in the area of trade and work to create, maintain, and advise on policies and procedures in the region. This means you are highly organized, calm and pay close attention to detail. A deep understanding of Google's business and the ability to think quickly and practically are essential attributes for the job.

20th century laws don't always solve 21st century problems, and Google Legal crafts innovative approaches for working with some of the toughest legal challenges of the information age. Whether you're a patent attorney, an intellectual property expert or an engineer headed to law school, Google Legal lets you address unanswered legal quandaries and create new precedents. Our innovative services raise challenging questions that demand creative and practical answers. We provide those answers by working at the crossroads of the law and new technology, helping Google build innovative and important products for users around the world.

Responsibilities:

- Ensure trade compliance for the EMEA region by developing and implementing import policies, compliance measures, and procedures.
- Determine regulatory requirements and /or certifications or other requirements for import and export of products into the EMEA region.
- Identify potential risk areas for Google's supply chains and advise on compliance processes and procedures to mitigate these risks
- Stay up to date on regulatory developments, participate in industry groups, and help to shape Google's approach to trade compliance
- Assist with the registration and readiness of entities to import into countries in the EMEA region
